

109 DEAD FROM CAMBRIA MINE

MINERS THINK THERE ARE 50 MORE BODIES THERE.

They Deny Statement of Mine Officials
That All the Workings Have Been Explored. Forty Funeral Yesterday in Johnstown $200 in Silver Bell.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., July 12.—After the Cambria mining officials had made an official announcement at 1 o'clock this evening that every part of the mine affected by the explosion had been visited and the bodies removed, a searching party came upon the bodies of four other miners who had met instant death from the poisonous gas. They were brought to the surface about 10 o'clock tonight and placed in charge of a local undertaker.

The bodies, now recovered number 109, and it is announced that two or three of the injured men in the hospital will be found there.

There is a serious question in the minds of many as to whether the Cambria mining officials are not mistaken, and greatly so, in placing the last of dead at not more than 115. Some of the miners say that several headings still inaccessible on account of deadly gases have not been explored and that from fifty to seventy-five bodies will be found there.

Forty funerals took place today in St. Stephen's Catholic Church. Nearly all of the victims were members of Cassius' congregation, which has been in the way to completion. The vestry of the church was continually filled with coffins and many of them straddled to the steps.

The Cambria officials this afternoon started an inquiry that promises to be rigid. The State mine inspectors take the lead in the investigation, and called will be in the main the mine officials caught in the explosion who are on the road to recovery.

In one house in Cambria lived fifteen slaves, who hired a woman who had been working on some startings on the body of one of these men, recovered yesterday and taken to the morgue for identification, was over $200 in money. It was found in a belt.

THE BOY'S OWN HAMMOCK.

We Can Make It Itself Out of Barrel Staves and Clothesline.

There are times again and again in camp and in the out-of-doors dens that boys love to have when a place to rest while reading or a place to draw through a day of drizzling rain is in great demand. Generally, just what the most wants it the four blankets and two ties are too wet to use for a bed, and, besides, it is too much trouble.

Now here is a way to make a really practical hammock that will fit the bill and get several barrel staves, a clothesline and some staves from the staves.

Take a three-quarter-inch bar in each end of each stave with a heated poker. Then lace thin rope or twine is good through the holes. This can be accomplished easily. The stay blocks at each end of the hammock should be twelve inches long.

The hammock can be made entirely comfortable by placing upon it several couch pillows and covering them with a shawl.

ARABIAN PEARLS.

The Poetical Legend of the Natives as to Their Formation.

From the St. James' Gazette.
Barbary is the beautiful sandwich gives its name to a little archeopage lying twenty miles off the Arabian coast, bronted into a prominent note of late through the star about Kowar. This last is 7000 feet in height and of the same age as the cap of that is formed by the jutting out of the great triangular protection called Katar.

The heart paradise spreads all along the Arabian side of the Persian gulf for no miles of the s. ore. The ocean water is shallow for thirty miles from the coast, and thus a magnificent pearl-oyster bed is provided, in which 5000 boats all through the summer are rowed about by the natives.

Barbary is often called as an island thirty miles long and ten wide, lying directly north of south. All the northern half is exquisitely beautiful, but to one great garden of pomegranates, citrus, lemon and orange trees, toadstools, magnolia trees, palms, etc. A tiny town of 2000 inhabitants is situated on the north, constituting the capital. It is situated on the northern apex of the main island. All Barbary is of considerable interest for its sandalwood, pearls, pearls, pearls.

The sons of Mr. Arckle, Sirach and Nesson complete the group of islands, the more remote ones being the members of the Barbary group. The population of the two is approximately 2000, or a total about 5000.

Barbary is the capital of the Barbary and is a harbor to 1000 ships. Around 1000 is a harbor to 1000 ships. The left hand and beauty of the northern portions are easily accessible, and the right of copious, warm, soft suns.
